

AN ODD MAN WAS PUMP CARPENTER

Death Of This Unique Character In Wisconsin History At Carthage, Mo., Recalls Old Reminiscences.

CLAIMED STATE OWED HIM $50,000

Was A Pioneer Printer And Was Reputed To Have Been The Original Inventor Of The Self- Binder.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 22.—In the passing of Stephen D. "Pump" Carpenter, news of whose death at Carthage, Mo., last Friday has reached Madison, his former home for half a century, the career of one of the most unique and picturesque characters of Wisconsin's history was closed. He was eighty-five years old. He was a pioneer printer of Wisconsin and a unique character because of the inventive bent of his mind. He is reputed to be the original inventor of the self-binder, but for last score of years he lamented that his great discovery was stolen from him. He invented a voting machine and tried to get it introduced by legislatures and city councils, but without success, and this was the general rule with most of his inventions—they failed to bring returns to him. He also invented a typesetting machine and it is said that he was the first man in this country to use wood-cut illustrations. He is here given the credit of discovering the secret of the "knot-tying" appliance of the self-binder. Back in civil war time he was a prominent politician, once a democrat and later of republican persuasion.

During the last five sessions of the legislature he was a familiar figure of pathetic aspect, pressing for the necessary legislation to allow him to bring suit for an old claim for state printing. He said that some $50,000 was due him. This claim was denied by the supreme court during the chief justiceship of William Penn. Lyon, for the reason that the court held the statute of limitations to have run in favor of the state. He was as firmly of the opinion that his claim was just as people generally have been that there was no merit in it.

This old claim dated back to 1838, when Carpenter had the state printing contract for two years. Incidental to the Barstow-Bashford contest the cry of "printing steal" was raised and Carpenter was forced to compromise with the secretary of state and do the printing for a less sum than that named in the contract. The claim was for the difference between the contract price and the compromise. He claimed that the "steal" agitation arose because he deserted the democrats and turned republican.

His bill for permission to bring suit against the state aroused much sympathy, but was invariably killed in committee or one house or the other, and the old man would weep and lament that the "great state of Wisconsin" would not give him a chance to prove his case in court. Three years ago he left Madison to live with a sister in Missouri, and has been in Madison only once since.

Old settlers recall this quaint character with emotion. He was known to all the town and in his time, to the most prominent and influential people of the state. June 15, 1852, the two Madison democratic papers, Argus and Democrat, merged, retaining both names, and Carpenter became joint editor and owner with Beniah Brown. Next year Carpenter retired and E. E. Calkins became associated with Brown. At a later time Carpenter was connected with the old Wisconsin Patriot.

From a money making standpoint the little "Want Ad." often surpasses the fondest expectation of the advertiser. Think of a 25c or 50c investment making a sale of land or property which runs into the hundreds or thousands of dollars. There is no end to the availability of these columns; there is not a thing which cannot be bought or sold through them; not a deal but that can be brought to a successful termination; not a desire in fact but that can be satisfied. Not a few of the people but the greater share of the public rub shoulder daily through the Want Columns. The very item which you have to dispose of somebody else needs. You can telephone your Want today if you cannot send or bring it.

NOTE—The rate on classified advertisements in the Daily Gazette is 3 lines 3 times 25c; the same rate applies also to the Semi-Weekly Gazette, so that for 50c you may reach 30,000 readers in this vicinity.

COMING THEATRICAL EVENTS.

Tonight—The Standard Opera Co. in Friedrich von Flotow's "Martha." Tuesday evening, Oct. 23—The Standard Opera Co. in Balfe's "Bohemian Girl." Wednesday evening, Oct. 24—"A Mad Love," the same being an adaptation from "Lady Audley's Secret." Thursday evening, Oct. 25—Ross Melville in the "Hoosier" comedy, "Sis Hopkins."

The engagements of the Standard Opera Co. to appear at the Myers theatre tonight and tomorrow evening are of especial interest to the musical people of this city. They will be reminded of the old Abbott days by this assemblage of fresh, young voices. "The Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" have stood the test, and are given not only for their musical worth and popularity, but for their interesting story, clean comedy, educational value and their power to please diversified audiences. Every singer is a soloist, making it possible to give a prominence to the choruses and bits of songs so often slighted or omitted, while at the same time, with weeks of training, the company is blended into one harmonious performance. The management deserves much credit for putting these operas on with so much thoroughness, and that it is meeting with the success it should have, is evidenced by the large and enthusiastic audiences wherever they appear. The following is taken from the Racine News of October 4th: "It was an audience that taxed the capacity of the Racine theatre which assembled there last evening to hear the opera 'Bohemian Girl,' by the Standard Opera company. It is very seldom indeed that Racine is treated to grand opera and the Racine club did well in securing the Standard company to give this old but ever popular opera. It was an enthusiastic audience, many of the solos and choruses being applauded to the echo."

Carle Scores Another Hit "The Spring Chicken," with Richard Carle as the star, is in the full flush of popularity at Daly's, New York. Five of Mr. Carle's interpolated numbers represent his most effective work in Americanizing the book.

To Play in a Church Barred out of Baltimore by the theatrical syndicate, E. H. Sothern and Julie Marlowe, under the Shubert management, are planning to present Sudermann's "John the Baptist" in a church.

Mansfield in "Peer Gynt" Richard Mansfield and his company will appear in "Peer Gynt" for the first time at the Chicago Opera-house next Monday night.

"House of Mirth" Dramatized "The House of Mirth," as dramatized by Mrs. Wharton, and Clyde Fitch, is to begin its New York engagement at the Savoy theatre tomorrow night.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, October 22, 1866.—Patting in the Foundation.—The Baptist Society is doing the very sensible thing of putting in the foundation for the new church this fall, leaving it until spring before the superstructure is commenced. This will permit whatever settling there might be before the walls are put on, and the further advantage will be obtained of enabling the commencement of work some weeks earlier in the spring. We observe by a notice elsewhere that a call has been made for 50 per cent of the original subscription, to enable the building committee to pay their way as they go, and to take advantage of the market in the purchase of material. This is an evident purpose to drive the work along to a successful conclusion.

The New Bridge Over the Mississippi.—The survey for the new railroad and carriage bridge over the Mississippi at this point was commenced on Saturday last. This survey is ordered by the War Department, and will be made by E. H. Johnson, Esq., Chief Engineer of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, assisted by Edward Powers, Esq., a distinguished civil engineer of New York.—Rock Island Argus.

A despatch from New Orleans says: "The Louisiana discovery are fearfully alarmed by the discovery by detectives of about 5,000 stand of arms and four pieces of artillery which they claim belong to the rebels' association, but which in reality are the property of the Knights of Arabia, who are believed to be fitting out an expedition. Lieutenant Harding, of pirate Shenandoah, left New York on the 'Evening Star' for this port, to complete the arrangements for sailing, but as he went down on the ill-fated vessel, it is probable that the expedition will be delayed."

PAUL'S GOSPEL A BUGLE CALL

Jesus on the Galilean hills and preach and men pay very little heed. But the bugle sounds upon the air and in the distance is heard the tramp, tramp, tramp of the cohorts and legions of Rome, and then men begin to think. I believe that in the long run the brain is more potent than the arm, and that the heart is more potent than the brain, but when man has to teach a lesson in a hurry, he better use the rod. The dialogue which reaches the conscience like lightning when it is applied by the lash, and armies have brought nations to their knees, in penitential walls, when those nations have only whistled at the logic of the schools.

"Hush! Is the moral law on slabs, but Salamis, Plateae, Marathon, and Waterloo are the moral law in action, the moral law working out its equation in human flesh, in human suffering, in human moans. Battlefields are the gallows of the nations. Nations violate internal law, they transgress the gospel of the conscience, the planets and the suns, and then the great judge of the spheres lays down the law. This verdict is proclaimed, and an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life, and a right for a wrong, is wrought out at Vittoria, at Copenhagen, at Trafalgar, at Waterloo, at Naseby or at Marston Moor. God Almighty has made great use of the chariots and the phalanx. He has consecrated history with human blood, he has baptized the universe in the miseries of a million times a million hearts.

"I am for peace, but I love the old heroes, the gallant knights that now lie buried in the dust; the old heroes of Thermopylae and Syracuse, the gallant knights of Tours and Crecy, and Poitiers. When I think of a Brasidas, or a Caesar, or an Alexander, or a Philip, or a Frederick, or a Cromwell, or a Grant, my blood tingles, my heart leaps, and I feel the plaudits rising from my lips. These men were the prophets of Jehovah. They taught the lurid gospel, they emphasize it with the bullet and the arrow, and the spear. They shot the stern and the everlasting justice into human conscience. They perforated with minute balls a declogium in human souls.

"What God can not teach by the yew and the sunshine he teaches by the whirlwind and the siren. He would redeem, if possible, by sweetness, but if not, then by the power of God omnipotent, look out for storms! Look out for hurricanes; for Antietam, Valley Forge and Bunker Hill. For God will have truth conquer. He will have righteousness prevail, and along these lines of righteousness, these lines of truth, the Lord of hosts, backed by His invincible brigades of suns, backed by His loyal legions of the stars, will fight if it takes the eternities to win.

"Thus the nations in corps, in regiments, in cohorts, in platoons, to the music of the drum and the bugle, have marched their way toward right, and while the armies have advanced there has been a progress in the ideas and their ends. Babylon fights for the stomach, Rome for ambition, the colonies for the commerce, the colonies for liberty, the United States for right—always and forever for the right.

"Caesar's aim was more empire for the body, Themistocles' more empire for the mind, Washington's more empire for the conscience, Lincoln's more empire for the groaning and the wounded human heart.

"Once the king would not upon his throne and a multitude of faithful slaves would go out to whip a multitude of other faithful slaves likewise inspired by the nodding of another king. That was the day when men wore the collar of the serf about their necks, and the brand of the slave upon their brows; when the king wore purple and the multitude wore rags. Men have thought since then—they have thought themselves above the dust, they have thought the collar of their necks, have thought the brand out of their brows, they have thought despots of their thrones. They have thought down one by one all regimes of iron, all dynasties of blood, the imperial Caesars, the imperial knishers, the imperial czar, they have thought King Edward into innocuous desuetude, they have thought Washington and Jefferson, Lincoln, and Grant into the altitudes of honor, into the azure heights of greatness, into immortal and eternal fame.

"Not until the northern states, aligned with the victorious chariots of right went forth to cement the union and free the slaves did war attain its blossom, and not until the stars and stripes were lifted in proud triumph to the breeze did the great god of war, Mars, adorn his brow with jewels whose glory and whose lustre shall never fade away and never die.

"I believe that God's great heart beat with a new found joy. I believe that the angelic choros sang more glorious anthems on that day when the northern soldiers, you veterans here, donned your armor and stormed the citadel of tyranny and wrong and planted the banner of liberty upon the nation's peaks. The sun never shone on more lustrous scenes than were enacted there at Shiloh, at Antietam, at Vicksburg, at Chattanooga, at Gettysburg, and at Malvern Hill. Those battlefields were rostrums. You veterans were orators that day. Your audiences were the confederate brigades. Your words were bullets, and your splendid periods were rounded into awful emphasis by the booming of the cannon and the whizzing of the bomb. You spoke with a mighty eloquence that day. There was a tremendous logic in your words, there was a vast persuasion in your guns. Appomattox was the climax of your speech, and by the power of God it was the most august climax that the oration of the ages and the aeons has ever reached.

"That day was the day of jubilee, a day of hosannas, a day of amen hallelujahs when the south conquered and dethroned bent its knee a suppliant before the Union hosts, when the regiments of the south surrendered to the regiments of right, and said 'thou art my master and thou art my king.' The legacy of Appomattox was the greatest legacy that a victorious army ever put into the hands of man. It was a legacy of freedom; it was a legacy of right; it was a legacy of love. America began to live when the star spangled banner became a

THE FRANCHISE

It is, perhaps, a little unfortunate that ancient history should be dragged into the franchise discussion at this stage of the game and yet it may be just as well.

It will be remembered that Mr. Clough, representing the Rockford, Beloit and Janesville line, asked for a franchise permitting an extension of that line to Madison. About the same time local business men applied for a franchise.

After considerable delay a franchise was granted to Mr. Clough, but the restrictions surrounding it and the condition of the money market made it impossible to carry the project through.

Later a franchise was granted to the local parties, but similar conditions prevailed and the enterprise fell through. No blame can be attached to the promoters in either case. Capital at that time was timid and inter-urban investments were not the most desirable.

Conditions have changed, however, and Mr. Clough is now confident that with a liberal franchise he can finance the road. Sincerity is evidenced in the fact that the men behind the enterprise have advanced some $4,000 in preliminary work.

This was done after an assurance on the part of the council that the franchise asked for would be granted. That a moral obligation rests upon the city is apparent to every unprejudiced mind.

There is, but one honorable thing for the council to do, and that is to grant the franchise necessary to secure the road. The sentiment all over the city is crystallized in favor of this proposition, and if the council represents the city it can do no less than to recognize public sentiment. The question should be settled tonight, so that Mr. Clough may complete his plans for active work at an early day.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

The Oshkosh Northwestern says of the good roads movement: "That such a campaign has now been started in Wisconsin is a matter for sincere congratulations, and if the enthusiasm already shown is any criterion it may safely be predicted that a wonderful stride in advance in relation to road improvements is about to take place in this state."

"Of course these county organizations are merely a preliminary step in the movement, and the ultimate object is to have a permanent and strong state organization which will not only furnish the inspiration and necessary information for continued effort along the same line, but will be able to wield a favorable influence with the legislature to secure such laws as are desirable to promote the good roads idea."

It is reported that La Follette will support McGovern, the defeated Milwaukee candidate for district attorney. How can the father of the primary law do a thing like that?

Governor Davidson will have an enthusiastic audience at his meeting to night.

merely a step toward this final object.

This is true, for while the county organization is important, effective work can only come through united effort. When a majority of counties in the state are organized it will not be difficult to secure state legislation.

This does not necessarily mean a burdensome tax in the way of state aid, but it does mean a state commission with competent engineers at command to aid any county which desires to intelligently take up the work of road-building.

Rock county spends half a million dollars every ten years in road repairing. If this amount of money was invested in permanent construction results would be much more satisfactory.

The experience of Rock county is duplicated in many other counties, which means that during the last decade millions of dollars have been wasted on the roads of the state.

No great movement is ever inaugurated and forced to successful issue without organization. The good roads movement is a practical reform that should appeal to all taxpayers. It is an educational movement destitute of frills and theories and the theme is so interesting that it should be studied by everyone who has the public good at heart.

THE HOSPITAL.

The movement now under way to establish a permanent hospital, under the management of the Sisters of Mercy, is most commendable and entitled to every encouragement. The city has had a checkered experience with hospitals during the past twenty years, and the opportunity is now offered to secure the services of the best organization known in this country.

The Sisters of Mercy is a philanthropic society and while a branch of the Catholic church the hospitals they conduct are non-sectarian and their management is most intelligent and successful.

They are on the ground ready to invest experience and money to establish in Janesville one of the best hospitals in the state, and all they ask is hearty cooperation on the part of the citizens.

It is an opportunity which many cities would be glad to embrace, and the Bower city can not afford to lose it.

The charter prevents the city from making an appropriation for the care of emergency cases, but they are of frequent occurrence and common humanity suggests to every mind that the citizens can not afford to neglect or ignore them.

Some arrangement will be made with the Sisters to care for this class of cases. A still larger class is represented by people who are unable to pay regular hospital rates. These will be provided for. The hospital will be for the use of everybody who needs hospital care and treatment, and it will prove a credit as well as a blessing to the city.

BRYAN AND LA FOLLETTE

The following dispatch speaks for itself: "Sanborn, Iowa, Oct. 20.—In his address here, William Jennings Bryan referred to the political situation in Iowa and Wisconsin. He said: 'La Follette is the foremost reformer in the republican party, and has shown a great deal more moral courage than Governor Cummins or even the President. In fact, Senator La Follette has been the one republican senator who made consistent and courageous fight for railroad rate legislation. He offered nine amendments, eight of them recommended by the interstate commerce commission; but the republican leaders in the senate defeated them. 'The present republican candidate for governor of Wisconsin was backed by Senator Spooner and all the other political enemies of Senator La Follette. His election would be a triumph for the stalwarts and a humiliation for Senator La Follette, yet Gov. Cummins was willing to go to Wisconsin and speak in behalf of the republican ticket. Not only did he do that, but he eulogized Senator Spooner, one of the most notorious opponents of rate legislation, a man who is antagonistic to Senator La Follette on almost every question.'"

The Nebraska orator seems to have abandoned his government ownership scheme. His friend Hearst is also trying to conciliate the corporations which he has so vigorously denounced. Both men are office-seekers of the most prominent type.

The mutual admiration which exists between Bryan and La Follette is pathetic to say the least. Bryan is odious to the better element in the democratic party and La Follette voted with the democrats in the senate all winter. The two men have much in common.

Bryan is playing to empty houses in Colorado. At Fort Collins the hall was empty when he arrived and there was no one to talk to at Denver, so he left in disgust. The Nebraska orator has struck his level, and there are others.

It is reported that La Follette will support McGovern, the defeated Milwaukee candidate for district attorney. How can the father of the primary law do a thing like that?

Governor Davidson will have an enthusiastic audience at his meeting to night.

Action of Bank of England

Wall Street Journal: No more remarkable financial history than the recent advance in the Bank of England's rate of discount to 5 per cent. Not only is this rate the highest fixed by the Bank of England since the paying panic of 1890, but the directors took action in a most unusual manner on Friday, although they had not on Thursday and with the same facts before them, and had left the rate unchanged at 5 per cent.

It is true that the 5 per cent rate had been ineffective in preventing the further depletion of the bank's specie reserve. On Thursday the rates of exchange in New York were at a point which would have permitted the withdrawal of gold from London for importation to this country. As a matter of fact, however, this country is unlikely to call for much more, if any gold, and it is in a condition, barring accidents or the development of an over-speculation, to require no further assistance for its money market.

Assurances were, in fact, given the Bank of England on Thursday that New York would not draw more gold. Nevertheless the directors on Friday appear to have become alarmed over the situation of the bank, with its millions sterling of gold, and withdrew the 5 per cent rate, and declared the 6 per cent rate in the hope of checking the outward gold flow.

The 6 per cent rate undoubtedly has a large meaning for the world. It is signal proof of the great demand for money which exists everywhere and the result mainly of a widespread prosperity. It is unquestionably for moderation, especially in speculation. It means that high rates will prevail for the carrying of American stocks abroad, and it means also that foreign loans in this country will have to be paid when they mature, or many of them. After the first of January it is not unlikely that there will be considerable gold exports from this country, but that is not unusual in the first part of the year.

It has been repeatedly stated, and understood and believed that the lumber and the Swiss cheese factories in this state are clean on the average as the factories where other varieties of cheese are made, if not cleaner."

If the machine will do all that is claimed for it, and it is said that practical demonstration has proved that it will, the inventor is entitled to have his name written as one who has saved the lives and limbs of many fellowmen.

"Fad be not done so," remarks the Madison Democrat, "an issue might have been injected into the political campaign that would tend to disrupt party, readjust party alignments and create a prejudice of nationality such as has not been known in Wisconsin since the days when the Bennett law was a bone of contention. Limburger Vindicated

From Dairy & Food Commissioner Emery's open letter to John Luchinger, president of the Southern Wisconsin Cheesemakers' Association: "If you doubt the truthfulness of my statements, I request you to interview every member of this commission who has ever received any suggestions or instructions from me that they should make an investigation of that kind. Ask them if they ever heard of advance in any way, shape or manner the theory that the characteristic odor of Limburger cheese is caused by fith. The Smart Aleck newspaper reporter who started this fake report probably never expected anyone to take it seriously. My assistants and inspectors know that in conversation between them and me it has been repeatedly stated, and understood and believed that the lumber and the Swiss cheese factories in this state are clean on the average as the factories where other varieties of cheese are made, if not cleaner."

Divorced Friday; Wedded Saturday; A Special Permit

Lotta Van Fossen, Then Lotta Spurling Twenty-four Hours, and Now Mrs. Charles Deuermeyer.

Divorced in Rockford from a deserting husband on Friday, given back her maiden name and then married by special permit in this city late Saturday afternoon is the summary of Lotta Spurling's matrimonial history for forty-eight hours. Her home town was given as Rockford, Ill. Lotta Spurling was married to Delbert Van Fossen of Elmhurst, Ill., on November 24, 1900, and was deserted by the same within the year following. On Friday she was granted a divorce from him in Rockford and her maiden name was restored to her. On Saturday she came to Janesville with Charles Deuermeyer of Peoria, Ill. They were given a license to wed from the county clerk's office and secured from Judge Sage a special permit to have the ceremony performed immediately. It was late in the afternoon when they hurried to Justice Charles W. Reeder's office where the nuptial knot was tied. Lotta Deuermeyer is 28 years of age and Charles Deuermeyer 47.

TAXES IN REALITY ARE NOT HIGHER

Charles B. Conrad, Says that Wholesale Criticism of Assessors is Undeserved.

Assessor Charles B. Conrad has been hearing from some of the property-holders in the city who claim that there has been an unwarranted increase in their taxes. Some even talk of going before the city council and entering a complaint against the assessors. Mr. Conrad declares that the impression that there has been any increase in the ordinary tax is a general one, not only unwarranted but that a number of cases where a few hundred dollars have been added to original valuations have been added to original valuations in the few individual cases where property was rated at what the assessors deemed half its real valuation.

In support of his contention Mr. Conrad shows the figures obtained from City Treasurer Paterson relating to the taxes on the property of Stephen Hotelling on South Main street. The taxes on one lot valued at $3,500 amount to $62.20 and on the adjoining lot valued at $1,700, they are fixed at $28.27, making a total of $90.47. At first blush this seems excessive, but it is further pointed out that of the above amount $27.50 is a district sewer tax, which must be deducted in order to obtain the regular tax for purposes of comparison. When this is deducted the remainder is $62.97 which represents the 1906 regular levy on Mr. Hotelling's property. In 1905 the tax on the lot valued at $3,500 was $46.50 and on the adjoining lot (then valued at $1,600) it was $19.58, making a total of $66.08. Whence it can readily be seen that though the two pieces of property were increased $100 in valuation this year, as compared with last year, the taxes this year are in reality $23.11 lower in 1906.

This is only one illustration. Mr. Conrad avers that the same state of affairs obtains throughout the third ward. The erroneous impression is due entirely to the fact that the sewer tax has been merged with the regular tax to facilitate collection.

Throughout the first ward the regular tax will show an increase owing to the fact that there is a ward assessment to pay for the repair of the Washington street washout.

$5,000 NEEDED FOR HOSPITAL PROJECT

Committee Appointed by Twilight Club Met Saturday Night and Decided to Begin Active Campaign at Once.

The Twilight club committee, appointed to promote the hospital enterprise, met at the office of the Janesville Cotton Co. Saturday evening and discussed the proposition. The plan under advertisement is to aid the Sisters of Mercy in buying the Palmer Memorial hospital, place the management in their hands, and let them support and run it.

Dr. W. H. Palmer, who has charge of the property for his mother, offers to sell it at a reasonable price. Some $2,000 of the furnishings, belongs to him, and this he offers to donate to the Sisters. The Mother Superior, who has interested herself in the work is a woman of large experience, and for the past twenty-five years has had charge of the drug department of the Mercy Hospital in Chicago.

She proposes to take charge of the hospital and if the citizens are disposed to lend a helping hand, she will at once commence the building of an addition which will largely increase the capacity.

The most successful hospitals, especially in small cities, are conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. Racine, Oshkosh and Fond du Lac are under their management, and Madison is on the waiting list. Janesville is fortunate in being able to secure a Mother Superior who is able and willing to undertake the work, and especially as Miss Baker, the present very efficient matron, is liable to take up work in another field at any time.

After minor details are arranged the city will be canvassed by the committee and an effort made to raise $5,000. The physicians of the city are interested and will contribute liberally, but this is a question which should appeal to every good citizen.

The city needs a hospital where emergency cases can be cared for and where people who are not able to pay regular hospital fees can be accommodated at a reasonable price. There is no place today for the former class of cases except the poor house, and people in moderate circumstances are deprived of hospital attendance.

With the Sisters of Mercy in charge, these conditions will be changed, and all classes needing attention will be cared for. The hospital once established will be permanent, this is also worth considering.

The committee having the matter in charge is composed of T. O. Howe, Geo. S. Parker, Fred L. Baines, Sam Smith and H. B. Bliss. These gentlemen were appointed at the Twilight club meeting and after careful investigation they are enthusiastic over the plan. The Gazette bespeaks for them a cordial reception when they start out to raise funds.

The Twilight club committee, appointed to promote the hospital enterprise, met at the office of the Janesville Cotton Co. Saturday evening and discussed the proposition. The plan under advertisement is to aid the Sisters of Mercy in buying the Palmer Memorial hospital, place the management in their hands, and let them support and run it.

Dr. W. H. Palmer, who has charge of the property for his mother, offers to sell it at a reasonable price. Some $2,000 of the furnishings, belongs to him, and this he offers to donate to the Sisters. The Mother Superior, who has interested herself in the work is a woman of large experience, and for the past twenty-five years has had charge of the drug department of the Mercy Hospital in Chicago.

She proposes to take charge of the hospital and if the citizens are disposed to lend a helping hand, she will at once commence the building of an addition which will largely increase the capacity.

The most successful hospitals, especially in small cities, are conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. Racine, Oshkosh and Fond du Lac are under their management, and Madison is on the waiting list. Janesville is fortunate in being able to secure a Mother Superior who is able and willing to undertake the work, and especially as Miss Baker, the present very efficient matron, is liable to take up work in another field at any time.

After minor details are arranged the city will be canvassed by the committee and an effort made to raise $5,000. The physicians of the city are interested and will contribute liberally, but this is a question which should appeal to every good citizen.

The city needs a hospital where emergency cases can be cared for and where people who are not able to pay regular hospital fees can be accommodated at a reasonable price. There is no place today for the former class of cases except the poor house, and people in moderate circumstances are deprived of hospital attendance.

With the Sisters of Mercy in charge, these conditions will be changed, and all classes needing attention will be cared for. The hospital once established will be permanent, this is also worth considering.

The committee having the matter in charge is composed of T. O. Howe, Geo. S. Parker, Fred L. Baines, Sam Smith and H. B. Bliss. These gentlemen were appointed at the Twilight club meeting and after careful investigation they are enthusiastic over the plan. The Gazette bespeaks for them a cordial reception when they start out to raise funds.

In place of the usual autumn dancing party the Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Patrick's church is planning to have a banquet. This will probably be served on or about the eighth of November at the Myers house. It is very likely that the feast will be made an annual event. The society is one of the strongest auxiliary church organizations in the city, having a membership of one hundred and fifty-four young ladies.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF TAKING CASH UNDER FALSE PRETENCES

Elizabeth Mohe of South Beloit Claimed to Have $2,000 Tied up in a Bank—Other Beloit News.

Coming across the state line from Illinois into Wisconsin yesterday Elizabeth Mohe, a resident of South Beloit, was arrested on the charge of securing money under false pretences. With District Attorney John L. Fisher prosecuting, she was brought up before Judge Rosa in the Line City Municipal court this morning at eight o'clock and her hearing set for November 1st. Bail was placed at $500, but as it is not likely she will be able to secure this, a commitment to all the Rock county jail will be in all probability be made. Mrs. Mohe is a German woman and she is alleged to be guilty of several frauds. It is said that a year ago she asked for credit on her board at the home of Mrs. Hevey in Beloit, claiming that she had a $2,000 check on the Walsh bank in Chicago, but could not secure the money owing to financial troubles the institution was in. On this same pretence she is accused of having secured $39 in cash from Mrs. Hevey and $200 from a Beloit bank. The authorities claim no such check ever existed and are now trying her on the grand charge. The offense is punishable by a $500 fine or a sentence of from one to two years in the state penitentiary.

"MOOSIE" BLUHM RELEASED TODAY

EVIDENCE NOT DEEMED STRONG ENOUGH TO CONVICT.

ON CHARGE OF BURGLARY

Arrested by Officer Fanning Early Sunday Morning. While Tampering with Bostwick Door.

Driest Bluhm, sometimes called "Moosie," who was arrested by Officer Patrick Fanning about two o'clock Sunday morning in the alleged act of trying to break into J. M. Bostwick & Sons' dry-goods store via the rear door, is a free man. He was released today when it became apparent that it would be very difficult to make a charge of burglary stand up against him.

Officer Fanning had been through the alley, had passed down the street, retraced his steps, and was literally passing Koebelin's jewelry store when a grating noise coming from the vicinity of the place above mentioned came to his ears. He cautiously stepped in and with some dry-goods boxes acting as a shelter was enabled to creep up on the man and learn what he was up to. The fellow had his slouch hat pulled down over his face and was fidgeting with both hands at the bottom of the screen door. Every time he pulled this out about eight inches the thing gave the same dismal creak that had attracted the officer's attention.

It occurred at once to Officer Fanning that there might be a confederate in the building, that he might have gotten there through the transoms at the top of the buildings just as the silk robbers did, and that the party he had come upon was probably trying to get the door open so as to clear the way for escape. So, when the tinker at the door deserted his task for a moment and went into a shed, presumably to find something to serve as a lever with which to pry open the barrier, the officer crept after him, and as he emerged from the place flashed the muzzle of a revolver in his face, at the same time ordering "Hands up!"

"Moosie" complied without hesitation. He was not disposed to argue the case, nor was he intoxicated. He told Officer Fanning that he had seen a light in Byrne's saloon from Main street, and being quite anxious to quench a burning thirst had wandered around in the rear and made an effort to get in. Somehow or other he seemed to have picked the wrong door by mistake. So it seemed.

Bluhm was the chief witness in the Zimmerman murder trial. He also served a term in state's prison for attempted assault on a woman and was released only a few weeks ago.

$75 STOLEN FROM ITALIANS' TRUNKS HERE SATURDAY

City Marshal Appleby Went to Milwaukee This Morning to Arrest One John Tompa.

City Marshal Appleby went to Milwaukee this morning to secure an Italian sewer laborer, named John Tompa, wanted here on the charge of breaking open the trunks of some of his compatriots in the boarding-house conducted by Mrs. Farrell at the corner of Milwaukee and Academy streets last Saturday morning and stealing $75 in cash and besides numerous shirts, neckties, and other wearing apparel.

Tompa came here to work last Tuesday. On Saturday he laid off, pretending to be ill. After the men had gone to work it is alleged that he made the raid on the trunks and quit the city.

The police department at once telegraphed Milwaukee and this morning word came from the Milwaukee department that the man had been located.

GOVERNOR TO ATTEND THE OPERA TONIGHT

Manager Margaret Brown, Learning He Is to Be in City, Extends Invitation to Occupy Box.

"Well, sir, we'll just reserve a box for Governor Davidson and party and endeavor to persuade him to attend the opera at the conclusion of his address this evening," said Miss Margaret H. Brown of Chicago, manager and impresario of the Standard Opera Co., which opens a two nights' engagement at the Myers theatre this evening in the old favorite, Von Flotows "Martha." "Of course, we bid for Janesville's attention first," she continued, "but political exigencies in a state like Wisconsin are always to be expected. I am told, anyway, we shall be glad to have the governor with us. If he will come, even though he does trespass on my time that is rightfully ours during the earlier portion of the evening. And you say the fate of an interurban franchise must also be determined tonight? What a busy town this is to be sure." Later Chairman McNamara of the republican county committee has accepted in behalf of the governor. There will be a party of eight in the governor's box.

The Standard Opera Co. arrived near noon today from Belvidere. Manager Myers says that over $50 tickets have already been sold for the two nights and excellent houses are, therefore, assured. He has gone to great pains and expense to decorate the balcony and boxes with smilax, palms, and autumn leaves, and the interior of the playhouse will be very pleasing to the eye, indeed, this evening.

As for tonight's offering the opera "Martha" it was first produced in 1847. Yet it is doubtful if many of the present generation have ever seen it. It is light opera, but does not belong to the modern type of light opera for which real lovers of music will be grateful.

WINNERS OF THE GUESSING CONTEST

Miss Hallie Turner and W. S. Haight Were First to Supply Missing Word in "An Artist in Crime."

The first two persons to give the correct title of the new continued story which has its opening chapters in the Gazette this evening, are Miss Hallie Turner, 17 South Main street, Janesville, and W. S. Haight, rural route No. 1, Rock county.

The correct title to the story is, "An Artist in Crime," and these first solutions came to the Gazette office on Monday, October 15th. Several other persons gave the title correctly during the week, and there were many answers by others which covered a variety of subjects. Among them "An Artist in Name," "Venice," "Color," "Love," "Arcadia," "Woogie," "Black," etc. The interest displayed gives indication of the literary inclination of many readers and the Gazette congratulates the successful guessers as well as those who solved the mystery correctly but whose answers were not received in time to count for them. The Gazette offered a year's subscription to the daily edition free—one for the city and one for the county. ## LEAPED TO DEATH FROM MOVING TRAIN

Scandinavian Named Nelson Was Killed Near Oregon-Late Saturday Afternoon.

Near Oregon late Saturday afternoon a Scandinavian named Nelson, in attempting to alight from a C. & N. W. southbound Chicago train, No. 504, due here at 6:30, while it was in motion, was thrown under the wheels and instantly killed. The unfortunate man was under the influence of liquor when he got aboard and did not learn until after the train was underway that it was not bound for Milwaukee, the place which he wished to reach. Conductor J. H. Dowd of this city told him that if he would get off at Oregon he could catch a train back to Madison and remedy the error. As the train was nearing that station, after the brakeman had called it, the conductor passed through, leaving the door of the smoker open behind him. Just as he stepped to the door of the adjoining coach and was in the act of opening it, Nelson dashed out and leaped to his death. The passenger was delayed one hour by the accident. F. S. Barnes, of this city, was aboard one of the coaches and saw the tragedy.

CHAPTER I.

A GENTLEMAN THINKS HE CAN COMMIT A CRIME AND ESCAPE DETECTION.

"That was a close call, though," replied the Pullman porter who had given Mr. Barnes a helping hand in his desperate effort to board the midnight express as it rolled out of Boston. "I wouldn't advise you to jump on moving trains often."

"Thank you for your good advice and for your assistance. Here's a quarter for you. Show me to my section. I am nearly dead; I am so tired."

"Upper 10. Right this way, sir. It is all ready for you to begin in."

When Mr. Barnes entered the coach, no one was in sight. If there were other passengers, they were asleep. A few minutes later he was alone in his compartment. He was putting two little bags of feathers and placing one atop of the other in a vain attempt to make them serve as one pillow. He had told the porter that he was tired, and this was so, true that he should have fallen asleep quickly. Instead his brain seemed specially active and sleep impossible.

Mr. Barnes—Jack Barnes, as he called himself to the porter—was a detective, and counted one of the shrewdest in New York, where he controlled a private agency established by himself. He had just completed what he considered a "most satisfactory piece of work." A large robbery had been committed in New York, and suspicion of the "strongest nature" had pointed in the direction of a young man who had immediately been arrested. For ten days the press of the country had been trying and convicting the suspect, during which time Mr. Barnes had quietly left the metropolis. Twelve hours before we met him those who read the papers over his toast had been amazed to learn that the suspect was innocent and that the real criminal had been apprehended by the keen-witted Jack Barnes. What was better, he had recovered the lost funds, amounting to $40,000.

He had had a "long chase" after this man, whom he had shadowed from city to city and watched day and night, actuated to this course by a slight clew in his hand had placed his faith. Now, his man fast in a Boston prison, he was on his way to New York for requisition papers. As he had said, he was tired, yet despite his need of complete rest his thoughts persisted in rehearsing all the intricate details of the reasoning which had at last led him to the solution of the mystery. As he lay in his upper berth awake these words reached his ears:

"If I knew that man Barnes was after me, I should simply surrender."

This promise to be the beginning of an entertaining conversation, and as he could not sleep Mr. Barnes prepared to listen. Extensive experience as a detective had made him long ago forget the philosophic arguments for and against eavesdropping. The voice which had attracted him was low, but his ears were keen. He located it as coming from the section next ahead of his, No. 8. A second voice replied:

"I have no doubt, that you would. But I wouldn't. You overestimate the ability of the modern detective. I should actually enjoy being hounded by one of them. It would be so much pleasure, and, I think so easy, to elude him."

The last speaker possessed a voice which was musical and he articulated distinctly, though he scarcely ventured above a loud whisper. Mr. Barnes cautiously raised his head, arranging his pillows so that his ear would be near the partition. Fortunately the two men next to him had taken the whole section, and the upper berth had been allowed to remain closed. Mr. Barnes now found that he could readily follow the conversation, which continued thus:

"But see how that Barnes tracked this Pettigill day and night until he had tripped him. Just as the fellow supposed himself safe he was arrested. You must admit that was clever work."

"Oh, yes, clever enough in its way, but there was nothing specially artistic about it. Not that the detective was to blame. It was the fault of the criminal. There was no chance for the artistic."

Yet Mr. Barnes had used that very adjective to himself in commenting upon his conduct of this case. The man continued:

"The crime itself was artistic. Pettigill bungled. Barnes was slow enough to detect the flaw, and with his experience and skill in such cases the end was inevitable."

"It seems to me either that you have not read the full account of the case or else you do not appreciate the work of the detective. Why, all the clew he had was a button."

"Ah! Only a button, but such a button! That is where I say that the criminal was inartistic. He should not have lost that button."

"It was an accident, I suppose, and one against which he could not have guarded. It was one of the exigencies of his crime."

"Exactly so, and it is these little accidents, always unforeseen, though always occurring, which hang so many, and jail so many, and give our detectives such an easy road to fame. That is the gist of the whole matter. It is an unequal game this between the criminal and the detective."

"I don't catch what you are driving at."

"I'll give you a dissertation on crime. Attend! In ordinary business it is brains versus brains. The professional man contends with his fellows; and if he would win the race toward fortune he must show more brains. The commercial man competes with other tradesmen all as clever as himself. So it goes from the lawyer to the locksmith, from the preacher to the sign painter. It is brains rubbing against brains, and we get the most polished thoughts as the result. Thus the science of honest living progresses."

"What has this to do with the criminal class?"

"One moment. Let the philosopher teach you in his own way. With the criminal it is different. He is matched against his superior. Those in his own class do not contend with him. They are his brothers, his partners, his pals, as they term it. His only contention, therefore, is with the detectives who represent society and the law. No man, I suppose, is a criminal from choice, and it is the criminal's necessity which leads to his detection."

"Then, all criminals should be caught?"

"All criminals should be caught. That they are not is a strong argument against your detective for every criminal, we may say, is actuated by necessity, and therein lies the possibility of his defeat. For example, you may claim that the expert burglar lays his plans in advance, and that the crime being premeditated, he should be able to make such careful arrangements that he could avoid leaving telltale marks behind him. This, however, is rarely the case, for this reason: the unexpected often is not always happens, and for that he has not prepared. In a moment the secret police, ahead of him, and his feet steady away his caution, so that, as we have seen, he does leave a clew behind him."

"But when you say the unexpected happens, you admit the possibility for that to occur which could not have been promised; and therefore could not have been guarded against."

"That is true as the case stands. But remove the necessity which actuates our criminal and make of him simply a scientist man pursuing crime as an art. In the first place, we get an individual who will prepare for more accidents, and, secondly, would know how best to meet emergencies which occur during the commission of his crime. For example, if you will pardon the conceit, were I to attempt a crime I should be able to avoid detection."

"I should think that from your experience as a criminal you would be fit to earth—well, about as quickly as this man. Pettigill. This was his first crime, you know."

"Would you be willing to make a wager to that effect?" This last remark fairly startled Mr. Barnes, who instantly understood the meaning, which, however, at first escaped the other listener. He waited eagerly for the reply.

"I don't grasp the idea. Make a wager about what?"

"You said that were I to commit a crime I should be captured about as quickly as Pettigill. If you wish, I will wager that I can commit a crime which will be as much talked of as his, and that I will not be captured, or rather I should say convicted. I would not bet against arrest, for, as we have seen in this very case, the innocent are sometimes incarcerated. Therefore I stipulate for conviction."

"Do I understand you to seriously offer to commit a crime merely to decide a wager?" "You astonish me!"

"No more feelings than Pettigill's has surprised his friends. But don't be alarmed. I shall assume all responsibility. Besides, remember it is not crime that is scowled upon in this century, but detection. I wager with you against that. Come, what do you say? Shall it be $1,000? I want a little excitement."

"Well, you shall have it. At least you shall have the excitement of paying the bet."

"I have no doubt, that you would. But I wouldn't. You overestimate the ability of the modern detective. I should actually enjoy being hounded by one of them. It would be so much pleasure, and, I think so easy, to elude him."

The last speaker possessed a voice which was musical and he articulated distinctly, though he scarcely ventured above a loud whisper. Mr. Barnes cautiously raised his head, arranging his pillows so that his ear would be near the partition. Fortunately the two men next to him had taken the whole section, and the upper berth had been allowed to remain closed. Mr. Barnes now found that he could readily follow the conversation, which continued thus:

"But see how that Barnes tracked this Pettigill day and night until he had tripped him. Just as the fellow supposed himself safe he was arrested. You must admit that was clever work."

"Oh, yes, clever enough in its way, but there was nothing specially artistic about it. Not that the detective was to blame. It was the fault of the criminal. There was no chance for the artistic."

Yet Mr. Barnes had used that very adjective to himself in commenting upon his conduct of this case. The man continued:

"The crime itself was artistic. Pettigill bungled. Barnes was slow enough to detect the flaw, and with his experience and skill in such cases the end was inevitable."

"It seems to me either that you have not read the full account of the case or else you do not appreciate the work of the detective. Why, all the clew he had was a button."

"Ah! Only a button, but such a button! That is where I say that the criminal was inartistic. He should not have lost that button."

"It was an accident, I suppose, and one against which he could not have guarded. It was one of the exigencies of his crime."

"Exactly so, and it is these little accidents, always unforeseen, though always occurring, which hang so many, and jail so many, and give our detectives such an easy road to fame. That is the gist of the whole matter. It is an unequal game this between the criminal and the detective."

"I don't catch what you are driving at."

you anything of the nature of my intended crime."

"Why, do you suppose for an instant that I would betray you?"

"Well, yes, that idea does occur to me. Listen. As I said before, the necessities of the criminal prove his Nemesis. The necessities involve the object of the crime. That is always a good starting point in following up a mysterious case. The more unusual the object the better, since it will fit fewer people. Plunder is the commonest and therefore the least promising to trace from. Revenge is common also, but better, because the special revenge connected with the deed must lead to the special individual most likely to execute such revenge. In this instance I mean my own case—the object of the crime is so unique that the detective who discovers it should be able to convict me. A crime committed to decide a wager is perhaps new."

"Its very novelty is your best safeguard."

"Yet there are two ways by which it may be discovered, and that is two too many. Had I undertaken this affair secretly there would really have been but a single way for one to learn my secret—my own confession. As men have been weak enough to do this before now, I should even in that instance have taken precautions. But with my secret in the possession of a second party the position is more complex."

"I assure you on my honor that I will not betray you. I will agree to forfeit five times the wager in such an event."

"I prefer that you should be perfectly at liberty in the matter. I expect it to be thus. In your own mind at present you do not think that I shall carry out my purpose. Therefore your friendship for me is undisturbed. Then you count that, if I do commit a crime, it will be some trivial one that you may bring your conscience to excuse, under the circumstances. But let us suppose that a really great crime should be reported, and for some reason you should suspect me. You will hurry to my rooms before I get out of bed and ask me flatly whether I am guilty. As flatly I should refuse to enlighten you. You would take this as a confession of guilt. You would perhaps argue that if your surmise were correct you would be an accessory before the fact, and to shield yourself and do your duty you would make a clean breast of it."

"I am beginning to be offended, Bob. I did not think you would trust me so little!"

"Don't get angry, old man. Remember that only a few minutes ago you warned me that you would cut me dead after the crime. We artistic criminals must be prepared against every contingency."

"I did not think when I spoke. I did not mean it."

"Yes, you did, and I am not at all angry. Let it be understood then that you will be at liberty to repeat the facts about this wager should your conscience prick you. It will be best for me to expect and be prepared for such action. But you have not asked what the second danger of discovery is. Can you guess?"

"Not unless you mean as you suggested, your own confession."

"No, though that really makes a third chance. Yet it is so simple. Have you noticed that we can hear a man snoring?"

"No."

"Listen a moment! Do you not hear that? It is not exactly a snore, but rather a troubled breathing. Now that man is in the third section from us. Do you see the point?"

"I must confess that I would not make a detective."

"Why, my dear boy, if we can hear that follow, why may not some one in the next compartment be listening to our late-a-tete?" Mr. Barnes fairly glowed with admiration for the fellow's careful consideration of every point.

"Oh, I guess not! Everybody is asleep."

"The common criminal from necessity takes chances like that without counting on them. I shall not. There is a possibility, however remote, that some one in No. 10, say, has overheard us. Again, he may even be a detective, and, worse yet, it might be your Mr. Barnes himself."

"Well, I must say if you prepare against such long odds as that you deserve to escape detection!"

"That is just what I will do. But the odds are not so great as you imagine. I read in an afternoon paper that Mr. Barnes had remained in Boston in connection with the Pettigill case, and after a notion with properly securing his prisoner during the day, but that he would leave for New York tonight. Of course the newspaper may have been wrong. Then in saying 'tonight' it may have been inaccurate, but 'supposing' the statement were true, then there were three trains upon which his might have started, one at 7 o'clock, one at 11 and one at 1. One of these is not long odds."

"But even if he is on this train there are ten coaches."

"Again you are wrong. After his hard work on this Pettigill case he would be sure to take a sleeper. Now, if you recall the fact, I did not decide to go to New York tonight until the last minute. We found that we could not get a whole section and were about to bunk together in a lower berth when, so to speak, a miracle happened, they determined to put on another coach. Therefore, unless Mr. Barnes' secret ticket during the day, he would inevitably have been assigned to this coach."

"Had you any special reason for suggesting No. 10?"

"Yes, I know that No. 6 is 'necocopied. But just as we started some one came in, and I think took the upper berth of No. 10."

"Mr. Barnes began to think that he would have 'exceedingly difficult' work to detect this man in crime, were he really to commit one in spite of the fact that he knew so much in advance. The conversation continued:

"This, you see, there are two ways by which my object may become known; a serious matter if, unguarded against. As, however, I recognize the possibilities in advance, there will be no difficulty whatever, and the knowledge will be of no value to any detective, even though he be your Mr. Barnes."

STORM SURVIVORS TELL EXPERIENCE

MEN ARE WASHED INTO THE SEA AND DROWNED.

WAVES BREAK HOUSEBOAT

Ship Turns Over Three Times, the Number of the Crews on Her Sides Being Lessened After Each Whirl.

Key West, Fla., Oct. 22.—Survivors from one of the "houseboats" of the Florida East Coast railway extension along the keys tell a harrowing tale of death and destruction caused by the storm of Thursday.

W. P. Dusenberry, civil engineer in charge of the work on Long Key, who miraculously escaped death, arrived here on the Russian steamer Jennie, among other survivors rescued. He says houseboat No. 4, on which were 160 men, was struck by the storm at five o'clock Thursday morning, and was driven out into the gulf through Saw's channel. At six o'clock the houseboat began to break up, and as the great waves hit her, men singly and in bunches of two and three, were washed into the sea and drowned. Some went below for protection, but when the top of the boat was carried away the waves rushed in and the boat soon went to pieces, 30 or 40 of the men being crushed to death in the collapse; the others grabbing timbers to save them from drowning. Engineer Dusenberry was in the hold, but succeeded in getting a log and floated until Friday night.

Boat Turns Turtle.

On one piece of timber 16 men were clinging, and nine were hanging to another. The sides of the houseboat was crowded with men. It turned over three times, each time reducing the number.

The Russian steamer Jennie sighted the wreckage and succeeded in rescuing the 49 men who were brought here. Three other steamers with searchlights were picking up men dead and alive when the Jennie left the scene.

There was another houseboat with a hundred and fifty men on board at Long Key, which Mr. Dusenberry thinks was also swept to sea.

There were in all ten boats at Long Key, mortar mixers, dredges and other boats engaged in the work. The survivors were furnished food and clothing from the East Coast railway commissary here, and were given medical attention.

The extension work of the railway along the keys was not damaged.

Steamer Loses Rudder.

New York, Oct. 22.—The Southern Pacific company's steamer El Valle arrived Sunday in New York from the Gulf of Mexico, having lost her rudder during the hurricane which damaged the southern coast, and was picked up by the Norwegian steamer Gotsard and towed into Port of Spain on October 1. The Eldorado took the disabled El Valle in tow and brought her safely to an anchorage off Seabright. Heavy weather was experienced during the entire voyage from Port of Spain. Tugs will be sent to tow the El Valle to her dock in this city.

Tobacco Crop Damage.

Havana, Oct. 22.—Reports issued by the government show that the damages sustained by the crops from the recent cyclone are not as great as has been supposed.

SETS WIFE'S CLOTHING ON FIRE

Pittsburg Man Hurts Lighted Lamp at Spouse and Knocks Her Down.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 22.—Screaming with pain and terror with her clothing ablaze, Mrs. John Doran rushed from her home into the street in Wilkensburg, near here Sunday, and after a policeman had extinguished the flames she was taken to a hospital in a critical condition, where she told a story of her husband's cruelty, claiming him with deliberately attempting to burn her alive.

According to Mrs. Doran, her husband had been drinking, and when he came home he began to abuse her. She says that Doran hurled a lighted lamp at her and then knocked her down. Then, she declared, he seized a towel which had lighted from the broken lamp and deliberately set her clothing on fire.

Her statements are substantiated by a 13-year-old daughter who, witnessed the father's cruelty.

Mrs. Doran's hair was turned to a scalp and her clothing above the waist was burned off, scorching the skin in a frightful manner.

Open to Foreign Trade.

Hong Kong, Oct. 22.—Upon the recommendation of the viceroy and a former railway minister, the government has sanctioned the opening of Whampoa to foreign trade. The opening has been deferred pending the completion of the Canton & Whampoa railway.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

The aches and pains of Rheumatism are only symptoms which may be scattered or relieved with liniments, plasters, blisters, etc., or quieted with opiates. As soon as the treatment is left off, however, or there is any exposure to dampness, or an attack of indigestion, the nagging pains, sore muscles and tender places on the flesh return, and the sufferer finds that he has merely checked the symptoms, while the real cause remains in the system. The cause of Rheumatism is a too acid condition of the blood, brought on by indigestion, chronic constipation, weak kidneys, and a general sluggish condition of the system. Waste matter collects in the system each day which nature intends shall be carried off, but when it is left because of a sluggish condition of the system it sours and forms uric and other acids. These are taken up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body to produce the pains and aches of Rheumatism. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism by going down into the blood and driving out the cause and making this life stream rich, pure and healthy. When the blood has been purified and built up by S. S. S. the pains and aches pass away, the muscles become soft and elastic, and Rheumatism driven from the system. Book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

TAKES VALISE FULL OF BONDS

Railroad Man Looked Up for Error in Taking. Hahndbag.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 22.—George O. Bell, a wealthy citizen of Chagrin Falls, O., near here, lost a valise containing $45,000 worth of negotiable bonds while coming into this city on a suburban car late Saturday night.

Another valise almost like his was left in its place by a stranger who sat close to Bell.

Bell did not discover his loss until he got off the car and he then made a report of the affair to the police. After working on the case all day the police Sunday night arrested Leslie O'Dell, a railroad fireman in a nearby suburb and found the bonds in his possession.

O'Dell said the thing was all arms take, that he did not know that he had taken anybody's property and that he had not even opened the valise. He was greatly surprised when shown the fortune which he had in his possession. All the bonds were intact. O'Dell was, however, locked up, charged with grand larceny, being unable to obtain bail.

TIMBER-LADEN SHIP CAST UPON BEACH

LIFE-SAVERS RESCUE CREW OF FIFTEEN MEN.

TWELVE HAULED ASHORE

Seamen Pulled Through the Surf to Safety Over the Breeches Buoy, But the Officers Refuse to Leave.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 22.—The steamer George Farwell, timber-laden, from Jacksonville, Fla., for New Haven, Conn., is ashore off Cape Henry, and will probably be a total loss, but all on board were saved. Capt. J. D. Chisholm and his crew of 15 men were landed from the wrecked steamer Sunday by the life-saving crews from the Cape Henry and Virginia Beach stations.

The steamer, laden with $75,000 feet of cypress timber, went ashore in a gale Saturday night.

She left Jacksonville Friday, October 12. From the start she encountered heavy head winds and was forced to go far out of her course. At her best she could not make more than seven or eight knots an hour, and most of the time she crept along at a speed far less than this. When Hatteras was passed late Friday night, Capt. Chisholm found his fuel running low and knew that he could not maintain sufficient steam by burning part of his cargo to keep the craft's head to the gale that was blowing. He describes the storm of Friday as the worst in his 20 years' experience along the Atlantic coast. Early Saturday evening the crew sighted Cape Henry light.

At that time a dense fog was gathering. Soon it obscured the beacon and the noise of the wind and sea prevented the warning siren at the cape being heard. Shortly before eight o'clock in the evening the lookout at Cape Henry life-saving station saw the steamer's lights close in shore, and about the same time the Farwell hit the beach.

The life savers hurried to the scene. On the second shot from the line gun, the crew of the steamer caught the line and before one o'clock in the morning 12 seamen had been hauled through the surf in the breeches buoy. There were left aboard Capt. Chisholm, the first and second officers and the chief engineer. They lashed the breeches buoy to the mast and refused to come ashore, so the life savers had to stay by on the beach all night. At daybreak all the baggage of the crew was hauled ashore and then the four men made the journey to land.

DEGENERATED ALCOHOL TRUST

BUYERS PREPARE TO FIGHT BIG CORPORATION.

Allegation Is Made That Concern Proposes to Maintain High Prices Through Illegal Agreement.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 22.—Large buyers of alcohol, distillers and others interested are preparing to fight, by appeal to the department of justice at Washington and by congressional action, if necessary, the recently formed Distillers' Securities corporation and the high price which it is charged, that corporation intends to maintain for denatured alcohol.

William Colton, an attorney of this city, who has the matter in charge, says that he represents distillers, handlers and others interested in alcohol in this and several other northern and southern states. Mr. Colton states that his clients have collected evidence, to be submitted to the federal authorities, that will show conclusively the existence of an agreement among those identified with the Distillers' Securities corporation, under which the price of alcohol is arbitrarily and unlawfully fixed and that under that agreement the price has been advanced to a figure almost three times as great as that at which alcohol could be bought subsequent to the dissolution, some time since, of the so-called whiskey trust.

While the names of those back of the movement are withheld, they are said to be people of means and position who will push their fight to the limit.

SHOCKING CREMATION OF LEPER

Shanty In Which Syrian Was Staying at Pickens Set on Fire.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 22.—The body of George Raschid, the Syrian leper, was cremated in a shocking manner at Pickens. The shanty in which he had been staying was set on fire and his body was consumed with it.

It is now declared that his death was the result of foul play. Many people at Pickens say the leper was given poison in his food.

Pickens' citizens opposed the presence of the man with the loathsome disease.

If he was murdered, the persons administering the poison well know that there would not be a post-mortem examination made of the body.
